

James's week in Ireland

James is back to London with his mother. Last week, he went to Ireland :
He spent a week at his aunt and uncle's in Dublin.

At the week end, he went to a Celtic music festival in Galway. He loved it ! A band sang a famous traditional song, Molly Malone. Molly Malone was a fishmonger who sold fish and mussels at the market.

He bought a CD at the festival, but he doesn't understand the lyrics because the band sing in Gaelic. His grandparents spoke Gaelic but they didn't teach his mother, and you can't study Gaelic in English schools, so he doesn't speak it.

(en rouge : toutes les marques du prétérit simple)